

Stokesley School and Sixth Form Alumni

Name:

Grahame Baker

Attended Stokesley School & Sixth Form from:

1978 - 1985

Went on to:

Corpus Christi College, Cambridge to study Engineering, graduating with an MA and an MEng.

Current role/s:

Principal Lecturer, Manufacturing Systems Engineering and Management at the University of Greenwich. Visiting Lecturer at Haute Etudes D' Ingénieur, Catholic University of Lille.

The best part of my job is:

Helping educate and inform the next generation of professional problem solvers both in the UK and in France.

Advice to current Stokesley students:

Don't waste your life doing stuff you hate doing. If you don't enjoy what you do, change it. Tim Minchin talks about "Micro ambition - put your head down and work with pride on whatever is in front of you. You never know where you might end up." I take this to mean, "Take every task as an opportunity to build your reputation, it may lead to something great that you don't know about yet."
